ProjectWise

Infrastructure project delivery software

from Bentley Systems

One governed place for your drawings, models and documents, from the first design file to final handover.

What is ProjectWise?

ProjectWise is Bentley's platform for managing the information behind engineering and construction projects. It gives design teams, contractors and owners a single, controlled environment to store, share, review and approve their files, so everyone works from the current version and every decision can be traced.

What it does for your team

One source of truth

A common data environment keeps files, models and documents in one organised place, not scattered across folders and emails.

Control of work in progress

Check files in and out, keep version history, and manage complex sets of files that reference each other.

Review and approval workflows

Route documents for review, track open comments and record who signed off and when.

Role-based access

Secure sign-in and permissions that match each person's role, inside the company and across partner firms.

Office and field access

Open, share and review project documents and models from the office or on site.

Correspondence and suppliers

Track project correspondence and manage the deliverables your supply chain owes you.

Who it helps

Designers and engineers

Manage drawings and models through the whole design stage, with version control and managed workspaces.

Project managers and reviewers

See project information, follow reviews and approvals, and keep the team aligned on status.

Owners and clients

Receive a well organised record of the project, ready to carry into operations and maintenance.

Why teams choose it

- Fewer version mix-ups and less time spent searching for the right file
- A clear audit trail for reviews, approvals and decisions
- Consistent standards and workflows across disciplines and offices
- Scales from small design teams to very large projects
- Smoother handover of project information to the asset owner
